

New case management program for PTSD in the neonatal intensive care unit

Summary: On October 1, 2017, Amerigroup Community Care is launching a new case management (CM) program in Maryland for screening of PTSD in parents of infants hospitalized in the neonatal intensive care unit (NICU). This CM program supports mothers and families at risk for PTSD due to the stressful experience of having a baby in the NICU.

What is the purpose of this program?

The NICU PTSD program seeks to improve outcomes for families of babies who are in the NICU by screening and facilitating referrals to treatment for PTSD in parents.

How it works?

Case managers will reach out by phone to screen parents of babies who have been in the NICU for 30 days or more. Parents who are determined to suffer from PTSD are referred for treatment.

What is PTSD?

PTSD is an anxiety disorder that may develop after exposure to a terrifying event or ordeal. Additionally, those who have witnessed another person experience a life-threatening event can suffer from PTSD.

Facts about PTSD:

- PTSD is diagnosed when stress symptoms persist for more than a month.
- Symptoms of PTSD include intrusive memories (i.e., flashbacks and upsetting dreams), attempts to avoid thinking or talking about the event, and hyperarousal (e.g., irritability or anger).
- The onset of PTSD symptoms may be delayed for as much as a year after the initiating event.

Why screen for PTSD in parents of long-term NICU patients?

- One in 10 infants in the United States are admitted to a NICU.
- Incidence of parental NICU-related PTSD varies from 20-41 percent.
- PTSD is treatable if identified.
- Lack of treatment can affect the health of the parent and the child.
- Children cared for by mothers with PTSD are at significantly higher risk for psychological aggression, child abuse and neglect.
- PTSD in parents can have long-term, adverse impacts on children, such as lower cognitive performance and conduct disorders.
